Community Impact Committee Proposes Childhood Obesity for New Three-Year Focus

The Community Impact Committee has been hard at work this summer researching potential focus areas for the League's new three-year community cycle, which will begin next year. The League's decision to elongate the cycle will enable us to make a stronger, more measurable impact within a specific area of Children's Health and Wellness, which remains the overarching focus of our League. In conjunction with this change, not only will the League continue to supply hundreds of volunteer hours to important causes, but will also fund specific agencies or in-League efforts approved within the focus and mission. This "triple-threat" combination of volunteer time, grant money, and three years to achieve our goals will facilitate what we hope will be a considerable impact in the community within this focus.

With such an exciting change, it was very important to choose a strong focus for the League's efforts. To do so, the Community Impact Committee spent countless hours talking with community advisors, researching Middle Tennessee data, and meeting as a group to determine the significant, defined needs in the Nashville area. We spoke with leaders at the Community Foundation, United Way, Memorial Foundation, Alignment Nashville, the Mayor's Office, Nashville Children's Alliance, Children's Hospital, CABLE, Rotary, and Leadership Nashville, as well as several League members that have served on Home Board and Community Research or received the Paragon Award for Community Service. The overarching theme in almost all of these conversations, as supported by hundreds of pages of supporting documentation, is that childhood obesity in Middle Tennessee is an epidemic. The major themes within this problem area are access to healthy foods, nutrition, and physical fitness. Childhood obesity is a problem in all races and at all income levels, which means the League has an opportunity to truly make a difference.

There are several "food deserts" in Nashville, neighborhoods where there is no access to healthy food. Transportation and lack of financial means are also a major problem for residents of these areas, which contributes to higher rates of obesity and health problems for this population. The greatest number of calls to United Way since January 2007 were requests for basic needs such as food. The 2011 Feeding America Hunger Study reported that 24 percent of children in Davidson County are food insecure (meaning they don't know where their next meal will come from) and that Tennessee ranks 40th in food security out of all 50 states (Metropolitan Social Services: http://www.nashville.gov/sservices/docs/com_needs_2010/CNE2010-Food.pdf).

Tennessee's childhood obesity rate is 20.6 percent which is the sixth highest in the U.S. (F as in Fat Report, 2010) and Davidson County exceeds Tennessee averages, with 26 percent of children and youth being classified as overweight or obese (Metro Public Health Department). According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, six out of 10 children do not get the recommended levels of physical activity each day (Youth Risk Behavior Surveillance System). The U.S. Department of Transportation reports that in 1969, 48 percent of children walked or biked to school every day. In 2009, only 13 percent did. At these rates, Tennessee's current generation of children is on track to live shorter, less healthy lives than their parents.

It is exciting to note that many local organizations and leaders are tackling this issue, so the League's focus on childhood obesity will merge well with several efforts that

President's Perspective

A message from Jillian Waters

Mission Driven Member Focus

Although written years ago by an anonymous individual, the expression, "To touch the future, reach for the hand of a child" still holds true today for the Junior League of Nashville. For more than 90 years, the League has actively molded the future of the Nashville community by developing, initiating, and placing into action a myriad of programs that better the lives of Middle Tennessee's children.

In the infancy of our League, Cornelia Keeble Ewing was able to galvanize the energies of 20 of her friends to establish a program to provide care, comfort, and convalescence by starting a home for children with orthopedic problems such as polio and spinal injuries. Over the years, the Junior League of Nashville has continued to create trailblazing programs, leading the nation in opening a mental health center for children (then Dede Wallace Center, today Centerstone), establishing a theatrical arts program for children (Nashville Children's Theatre), and advocating for abused children (Court Appointed Special Advocates or CASA).

Through the decades, community need-based issues have defined the work and strategic direction of the League. This past July, League members once again reaffirmed our historical legacy of improving the lives of women and children through the action and leadership of our members. During the July General Membership Meeting, the Community Impact Committee presented the findings of their social issues research, including the alarming statistics that Tennessee's childhood obesity rate is 20.6 percent, the sixth highest in the United States. Davidson County exceeds the Tennessee average, with 26 percent of children and youth being classified as overweight or obese (Metro Public Health Department). That evening, League members expressed their desire to impact the area of Children's Health and Wellness by working on adopting and devoting resources toward Childhood obesity issues.

A full report on the work and findings of the Community Impact Committee is detailed in this issue of the League Link. In the next few weeks and months, our members, as well as the community at large, will have the opportunity to learn more about childhood health problems related to improper diet and inactive lifestyles, as well as explore new and innovative ways to encourage children and families to embrace healthy eating and exercise habits.

Since 1922, the Junior League of Nashville has reached for and held the hand of a child. We have and continue to touch the future of this community. The work of the core group of League Members has evolved beyond its roots of a crusade providing a home for crippled children to that of an everlasting legacy of innovative volunteer service to improve the lives of Nashville's women and children.

Home Board Adds Three New Agency Partners

Most League members know the Home Board as the committee managing our decades-long relationship with the Monroe Carell Jr. Children's Hospital at Vanderbilt, the legacy of the JLN Home for Crippled Children founded in 1923.

But the Home Board also partners with several other agencies in our work to support the "crippled" child. (Though the term "crippled" is no longer used to describe children with a disability or disadvantage, the term was used in the legal documents setting up the trust that continues to fund the Junior League's work for children facing physical, mental, emotional, environmental, or economic challenges.)

In the spring and summer of 2012, the Home Board renewed one partnership and funded two new partner agencies through our Legacy Gifts, honoring the Junior League of Nashville's 90th anniversary. All three agencies will officially be Programs of the Home through May 31, 2015, also receiving JLN volunteer support.

Oasis Center has worked with the Junior League for many years. Its work with at-risk teens was funded in May 2012 with our $22,500 gift to purchase a van for use in transporting teens.

Preston Taylor Ministries has received support from the League in the past for its after-school program; our $32,850 gift will help the agency establish a volunteer coordinator and improve its development work.

Renewal House was founded in 1996, with JLN support, to help mothers with addictions and their children. Our $25,000 gift will aid the agency in creating a parent-child interaction therapy program.

Other Home Board agencies are Centerstone, the McNeilly Center for Children and the Nashville Children's Theatre.

Committee Seeks Input From Sustainers

Sustainers, a new committee has been developed just for you! Co-chairs Kate Meriwether (katetarleton@gmail.com) and Tana Kelly (scottandtana@comcast.net) will be hard at work researching ways to keep sustainers involved with the League either on a social or volunteer basis, or both, bringing back the Sustainer Luncheon and possibly organizing some other Sustainer opportunities. There are also plans to host a few small focus groups this fall. Suggestions or questions for the co-chairs can be sent to sustainerservices@gmail.com.

20 Years Ago: A Look Back at Junior League

The League is constantly evolving to stay in step with the needs of women and children in Middle Tennessee. In 2012 alone, we've already made significant changes to make the biggest impact.

But what was the League doing two decades ago to make a difference? Let's see what the League was up to in the fall of 1992:

- The League celebrated their 70th anniversary, which was themed "Junior League: The Power of Volunteers".
- The Home Board approved $750,000 to fund the Junior League Chronic Disease Program at Vanderbilt.
- The home of the William Benson family on Jackson Blvd. was the site for the Sixth Junior League Designers' Show House. A record 9,000 people visited the house; the event raised $136,000.

- The Women's Roundtable was reorganized and involved in a lobbying effort to preserve the Aid to Families with Dependent Children. The Public Affairs committee organized a letter-writing campaign and the effort ended with a highly publicized press conference.
- "Altogether Nashville", the League's public affairs television program, formed a new partnership with WDCN Channel 8. The new program was called "Heart of the Matter" and aired on Sundays at 3 p.m.
- A new flexible placement called "Done in a Day" was implemented.

Community Impact Chooses Childhood Obesity (con't)

may be further enhanced by our resources. Improvements have been made in our city, but there is so much more room for impact in the area. This focus provides for several potential agency partnerships with food banks, community gardens, health and nutrition programs, education, and more. Many in-League and community leaders have suggested that our own Kids in the Kitchen could become a headlining program for the League with a significant expansion. The United Way and other agencies have asked the League to lead original, groundbreaking projects such as community gardens and neighborhood walks that would reach a diverse population in Nashville. The Community Impact Committee sees a great opportunity for League members to become more educated in the focus area and for all of us to help improve the knowledge of the community surrounding nutrition and fitness ideals. We also have the wonderful chance to help provide those in need of healthy food the tools to grow or receive food, or information about and access to fitness initiatives.

In planning for the future of the League, it is important to note that our exciting “Done in a Day” projects will not be limited to agencies or programs that do not directly tie in with the new focus. This aspect of the community model will enable us to maintain and grow our strong ties throughout the entire non-profit community by continuing to make a strong impact in several areas for many years to come. At the end of the first three-year cycle, the Community Impact Committee will go through a similar process with the League and the community to recommend a focus for the following three years. Community Impact will work throughout each three-year focus to set goals and measure our successes in order to move the meter in impacting the important area of childhood obesity in Middle Tennessee.

Member Relations Offers New Events, Opportunities

One of the many reasons people join the League is to meet new people. The Member Relations committee is giving members new opportunities to make friends and get active in the League. This year, Member Relations will be hosting regularly scheduled events called Member Mixers, which include Happy Hours, Brunch & a Movie Saturdays, Mommies & Kids Play Dates, and Doggie Play Dates. Member Mixers are a great way to meet similarly situated members in a low-key and fun environment. Also, Member Relations is bringing back Supper Club and Book Club! Sign-ups will begin in October. Most importantly, the committee wants to hear from you! Please let us know about the important things going on in your life—marriages, births, promotions, moves, new pets, new hair color – ANYTHING! We want to celebrate you! Send your news to nicole.paulk@jln1922.org. Your Member Relations team hopes to see all of you out and about soon. Let's mix and mingle!

Junior League of Nashville University Launches Second Year

We are proud to announce year two of Junior League of Nashville University (JLNU), a three-year program that prepares League members for leadership roles within the League. Last year was the inaugural year for our very own leadership development series of trainings, and the Leadership track was completed. This year, we are excited to launch the Community track.

For this past year, we were honored to have all four of the JLNU trainings hosted by past presidents of the League. The trainings were a huge success and we learned so much! Congratulations to Julie Jolly and Sarah Woodall, who successfully completed the Leadership track. Thanks to all those who came to the various JLNU trainings throughout the year!

For more information on JLNU and how you can get involved, please contact Ceesun Andrews, Training Chair or Jade Tanumijaya, Training Chair-Elect. We hope everyone will participate in this exciting new leadership development program!

Kids In The Kitchen Offers Two Programs In 2013

Kids in the Kitchen has produced annual programs for the Junior League of Nashville and the greater Nashville community since 2008. This year is no exception and we are thrilled to encourage and promote the League's focus to decrease the prevalence of childhood obesity and encourage children to live a healthy lifestyle with proper nutrition and exercise.

This year, Kids in the Kitchen will present two programs. On March 9, 2013, the entire Nashville community will have the opportunity to participate in Kids in the Kitchen and learn about healthy foods and healthy living practices, while having fun through a scavenger hunt, fast-paced obstacle course, and other activities that challenge and teach children to improve their daily nutritional and lifestyle choices.

As an exciting new program for our membership, a second Kids in the Kitchen will be held at Headquarters on Saturday, April 20, 2013. This program will be open to all members' children, extended family and friends. You may notice that this event coincides with the second shopping period for the Club Twenty-Two Shopping Card. Bring your young family members to Headquarters for an exciting and educational morning, where volunteers and members of the greater Nashville community present information about healthy snacks and meal preparation, fun exercises and games to get kids outside and active, and a morning for our membership to take advantage of more fantastic shopping deals and opportunities with the Club Twenty-Two Shopping Card!

More information about both exciting events to be announced soon!

Think $20.13 In 2013

Last year, the Junior League of Nashville celebrated all of our accomplishments with a 90th celebration. From Reading is Fundamental and Our Kids, to the Home for Crippled Children and Nashville Children's Theater, the Junior League of Nashville has truly made a positive impact in Middle Tennessee. We are proud of our past accomplishments and are excited to continue this legacy of excellence into 2013. You can help this legacy by supporting our mission and members with a gift to the 2012-2013 Annual Fund campaign. Every gift, large or small, to the Junior League of Nashville Annual Fund supports the Mission of the League to make an impact in the community. Your gift to JLN's Annual Fund has an immediate impact in developing the potential of women.

Before the first June Council Meeting, the Board, Development Council, and Annual Fund committee had already pledged or donated at 100 percent. Immediately at that first council meeting, other councils and members joined in the campaign. Now, we're asking our sustainer, active, and provisional members to please consider a gift. The annual fund is a wonderful way to honor friends and family, so please join us in celebrating 2013 with a gift of $20.13.

You may make your 100 percent tax-deductible gift by:

Turning in cash or a check to headquarters earmarked for the annual fund;

Mailing a check to headquarters earmarked for the annual fund;

Calling headquarters and paying by phone;

Donating online with your credit card (go to www.jlnashville.org, and click on How You Can Help. Then select Make a Donation to the Annual Fund)

Thank you for your consideration and continued support!
